Junior Jacket Bid
Given to Mandel's

A short time ago another jacket would have been more meaningful, as another junior class jacket has been placed with Mandel Brothers by the junior class.

This committee under the chairmanship of C. Flanders, is making arrangements for the purchase of plaids for the jacket, as plans were previously secured and plans were well under way for this project. The committee, after careful study, decided that the plaid should be of the very best quality. The committee, therefore, has decided to close the bid with another concern. Mandel Woolens, a staple in their line of business, have been invited to make the jacket.

This action is a step in the right direction as the annual cost of these jackets has been reduced, and the quality of the material has been improved.

Wear Those Green Hats

What is with us wrong with green hats for the "freshmen" idea? For some reason the members of the freshmen class are not in the idea in the way that they should. They are not supporting and fostering that good old class spirit in the manner which we might expect from a group of students who certainly have not been discouraged as yet by the everlasting search after fashion.

Is it the inherent fault of the idea? Is it the fault of this generation of the school? Or, is it the fault of the freshmen? The answer to this first question is emphatically no. It has been pointed out again and again that if this undertakes to respond in the way that they should they can add immeasurably to the effectiveness of Junior Week, which is rapidly drawing near each day that passes. The caps will also aid the freshmen in organizing for Rush Day. In the past the freshman group has been slow in organizing for the rush and yet they have usually won because of their superior number. This year the situation appears different and if the freshmen do not get organized, custom may be broken and the already well-organized sophomore may walk away with the rush.

In answer to the second question, one can not say that the idea was not sufficiently advertised. The issue was well announced and no "freshmen" has not heard of it. Perhaps, however, it has not been pushed sufficiently enough. It seems then that it must be the fault of the freshmen and that is the general opinion. Some of the “freshmen” have not seen fit to wear their given “gad” even though they have them. There is no excuse for this. Some have not been able to find the hats and this is an excuse, since they may be obtained any day at the Armour Tech News office, fourth entrance, Chapin Hall.

We suggest that the freshmen organize, enter into the spirit of the thing, and wear those green “toppers.”

Intramural Athletics

In the issue of the News printed this week there was an article on intramural athletics, which is sponsored by the athletics committee of the Armour Tech News, with the equipment and funds of the intramural department. The purpose of the intramural athletic program is to provide an opportunity for students to participate in organized athletic activities, which are supervised by the intramural department.

The intramural program includes a variety of sports and activities, such as basketball, soccer, baseball, volleyball, and track and field. The program is open to all students who are enrolled at the University of South Dakota, regardless of their athletic ability or experience.

The intramural program is administered by the intramural department, which is responsible for organizing and coordinating the various sports and activities. The department also provides equipment and facilities for the athletes.

The intramural program is designed to promote physical fitness, teamwork, and good sportsmanship. It is an important part of the overall athletic program at the University of South Dakota, and it is open to all students who want to participate.
