Elliott, Academic Affairs VP, Attacks American Apathy in Education Policy

American failure to make progress in education, he said, results in part from apathy among educators and policymakers. He cited several specific examples of ways in which educators are failing to meet the challenge of educational reform.

Dr. Elliott, commenting on the recent Some of his points included:

- A lack of funding for educational programs.
- A failure to recognize the importance of teacher training and professional development.
- A tendency to focus on standardized testing at the expense of teaching for understanding.
- A lack of support for innovative educational approaches.
- A failure to involve parents and community members in the educational process.

Dr. Elliott emphasized that these failures are not due to a lack of resources, but rather to a lack of will and commitment.

He concluded by calling for a renewed commitment to educational reform, emphasizing the importance of collaboration between educators, policymakers, and the public in creating a more effective educational system.

ITSA Absentee Criticizes News Attitude

Dear Sir,

I feel truly the editor of Tech News you may find it offensive to the core of the ITSA Board of Council. I feel that the board must initiate some action to ensure that in the future we do not find ourselves again in a situation where our efforts to improve the image of the student body are carried out in a manner that is not in the best interest of the students.

I feel this is a situation where the board must take action. Unfortunately, your recent editorial statement about the lack of cooperation we have had to date does not seem to be in the best interest of the students.

Roger Williams Fails to Make Good Performance or Music

by Philip C. Roger

In all probability, the larger portion of the audience at a Roger Williams concert loses interest in the music and becomes restless and impatient.

The performer was in a state of nervousness and the music seemed to suffer. Even the most devoted admirers of Williams were not enchanted.

The performance was marred by the performer's inability to carry the audience with him. There were moments when the music seemed to be struggling against the performer. The audience was left feeling dissatisfied, and some even left the concert hall in the middle of the performance.

SHAKESPEARE DOESN'T LIVE HERE ANY MORE

Henry Wilkins, the well-known Shakespearean actor, was in the audience at the Roger Williams concert. He was deeply disappointed with the performance.

"I was expecting a great deal more," he said. "Roger Williams is a fine musician, but he lacks the depth and understanding of Shakespeare's works. It was a disappointing performance, and I believe the audience felt the same way."

A good sword nowadays is hard to find—and it is often false, too. Many a blade that was a peerless sword is now a hefty, hollow, and for swordsmiths alone the dimpled, weathered thing. To-day, however, swordsmiths are making swords that are as true to the old pattern as the original designs. They have discovered the secrets of nature’s life processes, and are using these secrets to make swords that will last for ages. The result is a sword that is not only strong and durable, but also beautiful. This is a phenomenon of how one is gaining new materials through scientific research and engineering.
